Cultural Suggestions

Plant in a sunny location in any good garden soil. Good drainage is very essential. Mix coarse sand, leaf mold, or peat moss and well rotted manure to a depth of twelve to eighteen inches. Sprinkle bone meal in bottom of hole, spread out roots, plant firmly at same level as grown before, do not plant too deeply. Sprinkle lime or bone meal, and leaf mold or peat moss on surface after planting.

May and June are the best months for planting. Space eighteen to twenty-four inches apart for cut flowers or garden display. When plants are established and growing or when about six inches high, pinch off the very tips of each shoot for cut flowers or garden display, pinch again when about ten inches high. If large blooms are wanted space twelve inches apart. Do not pinch for exhibition blooms only on varieties that grow too tall, or for timing blooms for certain dates. Select two or three of the strongest shoots, remove the rest.

When plants are starting to grow put in stakes and start tying as soon and as often as needed to keep stems growing straight. Tie cloth to stake and loop around plant loosely. Keep free from insect pests with rotenone, nicotine or other insecticide spray. Use also any good fungicide spray every two weeks. Remember the best time to spray is when you do not need it. Prevention is the best.

Do not let plants suffer for lack of water. Water at the root, do not sprinkle foliage on hot days. Water in morning or evening for depth of at least twelve inches.

Top dress plants end of July, third week in August, and second week in September, with manure, organic fertilizer, or a good rich humus. When buds appear feed with liquid manure, use weak diluted.

While disbudding or removing surplus stems, if leaves or stems break off too easily you are using too much water, or fertilizer, or both—cut down a little. Never let stems get woody, hard, which shows lack of water or fertilizer or both.

When buds begin to show color gradually cut down on water and fertilizer to harden and finish bloom. After blooms are through in the fall, cut down to six inches of the ground. During winter place small branches or sticks around and over plants, and place other loose material on branches, do not smother with material that packs. Or dig up and place in lighted and ventilated building, cold frame, etc., do not let dry out or keep too wet. Gradually remove covering in spring when growth starts. Watch out for slugs, in early growth. Use Meta slug bait. Make traps by placing slug bait under boards placed so rain cannot wet bait. Separate plants in spring, by breaking up clumps, plant only outer green shoots, or take new cuttings, and root in mason sand.
